INTRODUCTION

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin (LCIB) is the chief medium of communication between the Library of Congress and its staff as well as between the Library of Congress and other libraries worldwide. Appearing weekly, it generally includes descriptions of past and future events at LC, announcements of LC projects and programs, bibliographies, photographs, summaries of national and international conferences, and staff news both professional and personal.

Because of the Library of Congress's role as the de facto U.S. national library and supplier of services to other libraries, much of what LC does eventually affects other institutions. It is for this reason that the LCIB has such a wide circulation and is read regularly by other library professionals. Increasingly, the LCIB has begun to publish information of more than transient interest. Bibliographies on important topics, descriptions of the LC Optical Disk Pilot Program, explanations of the research in mass-deacidification and other paper preservation techniques conducted at LC, and announcements of new bibliographic products and services all may be useful for library professionals to refer back to a year, two years, or ten years from the time they are published.

In view of the increasingly long-term value of the LCIB, the Library of Congress Professional Association (LCPA), a 1900-member staff association of LC employees, has undertaken the project of producing an annual index. Formerly, the Library of Congress itself attempted to prepare an official index annually, but in recent years there have been insufficient staff and financial resources for this. This year's publication was produced entirely with LCPA funds and volunteer help.

LCPA first published the LCIB index in 1984 and expects to continue the index on an annual basis. In future years, the index may be cumulated to increase its effectiveness as a reference tool.

Please keep in mind that this is not an official publication of the Library of Congress. Those issuing the Library of Congress Information Bulletin itself are not involved in the preparation of this index.

Any suggestions or comments concerning the approach taken in this index will be gratefully received by next year's editorial staff. Please address any correspondence to: LCIB Index Project, LCPA, The Library of Congress Professional Association, Washington, DC 20540.

About the Index

This index was prepared using terms from a special thesaurus created specifically for this project. The thesaurus is based chiefly on Library of Congress Subject Headings, with certain extensions and modifications called for by the nature of the publication being indexed. Some LCSH subdivisions have been used, but they have been kept to a minimum; more often, what might otherwise have been a subdivision has been given as explanatory text preceding the page reference. An attempt has been made to model name headings on the established form according to the Anglo-American Cataloguing Rules and the LC authority file wherever feasible.

It may also be helpful for users of this index to be aware of the following guidelines that were adhered to in its preparation:

- A number of collective headings have been used to bring together certain kinds of events, publications, etc. These include the following:

ACQUISITIONS (LC)
AUTOMATION (AT LC)
AWARDS, CITATIONS AND PRIZES (LC)
BIBLIOGRAPHIES (PRESENT IN TEXT)
CONCERTS (LC)
DONORS (TO LC)
EXHIBITS AND DISPLAYS (AT LC)
PLAYS (AT LC)
RADIO BROADCASTS (FROM LC)
READINGS, LECTURES AND OTHER SPECIAL PROGRAMS (AT LC)
VISITORS (TO LC)

In most cases, the events, etc. collected under these headings are also separately indexed; in others this constitutes the only access to this information. For example, visitors to LC and LC staff winning service and achievement awards are not indexed individually by name, unless they are the subject of an entire article; instead the collective headings above cite all the pages on which lists of visitors or lists of awards appear.

- Permanent LC staff appointments, promotions, resignations, etc. are listed separately in a special appendix. Beginning with the 1985 Index, temporary appointments are not listed. Appointments, promotions, resignations, etc. which are the subject of entire articles are also indexed in the body of the index.

- Beginning with the 1985 Index, LC organizational units (offices, divisions, etc.) are all entered as subdivisions under the following directorates:

Congressional Research Service (LC)
Copyright Office (LC)
Law Library (LC)
Management Services (LC)
National Programs (LC)
Office of the Librarian (LC)
Processing Services (LC)
Research Services (LC)

"See" references lead from subdivision names to the LC directorate under which these items are entered.

- The presence of photographs in LCIB is not indicated in the index.

- Persons, publications and events mentioned only peripherally are generally not indexed.

--The index is alphabetized generally according to the current Library of Congress Filing Rules (Washington: Library of Congress, 1980). Among other things, this means that numerals file before letters, abbreviations file letter by letter according to their actual spelling, and subdivisions file before additional punctuation, e.g.:

"The 116th Edition Ringling Bros. Circus"
ABC Inc.

Adelphi
ALA
American

Libraries
Libraries--Economic aspects
Libraries, Children's
Libraries and minorities
Library administration

--Because the "blue pages" of the LCIB are not numbered, these are referred to in the index by the page number immediately preceding the blue section with the addition of a lower case letter a,b,c,d (etc.), referring to the first, second, third, fourth (etc.) blue page, e.g., 40a, 40b, 40c, 40d (etc.).

--The following list of abbreviations is used in explanatory text (though not in headings) in the Index:

American	Amer
assistant	asst
associate	assoc
association	assn
Building	Bldg
collection	coll
compiled	comp
conference	conf
